Dear Elizabeth Atkinson,

following our conversation, I have enclosed some copies of articles giving some more background information on Pat Murphy and Brid Brennan, which came out after the Irish opening of ANNE DEVLIN.

As I mentioned, the film will be opening at the Screen on Baker St at the end of January, hopefully staying there for several weeks before then playing at independent cinemas round the country, as well as at other cinemas in London.

Incidentally, Brid Brennan, who plays Anne Devlin, will be coming to London at the end of November in a play that will be going into the Royal Court. She's been doing quite a lot of work since the film, and hopefully may become more of a familiar face in the future.

If you would like any more information, about the film, or about Cinema of Women, then do get in touch.

Yours sincerely,

Penny Ashbrook.
